Cardinals, Relatives And Diplomatic Corps At Final Service

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 14—In solemn and impressive ritual performed behind the locked bronze doors of St. Peter's church, burial services were held for Pope Pius XI today and his body taken to its last resting place in a white-washed crypt beneath the high altar.

Only members of the College of Cardinals, relatives of the pontiff, members of the diplomatic corps and those of the papal household were present when the church made its final obsequies to the Pope of Peace.

The public had its opportunity to file past the pontiff's candle-lit bier until 1 o'clock this afternoon. At that hour, some two million silently weeping mourners had streamed through the ancient edifice to pay their last weeping tribute to the 81 year old vicar of Christ.

Then the great bronze doors were swung shut and in the brilliantly lighted church the immortal murals and frescoes of Michaelangelo looked down on a solemn and slowly-moving pageant of funeral splendor.

At exactly 3 p. m., canons of the Vatican chapter of the Holy See in funeral vestments led the sombre procession into the chapel (Continued on Page Two)

BRICKER'S TALK IN PHILADELPHIA PRESIDENCY BID?

Impression Made On G.O.P. In Lincoln Address May Determine Future

Government's Course Flayed As Hopeless; Activity In Ohio Discussed

COLUMBUS, Feb. 14—With an eye on the 1940 presidential campaign, political observers today gauged the impression made on Philadelphia Republicans by Ohio's governor, John W. Bricker, in a Lincoln Day address to the conservative Union League Club.

His eulogy of Lincoln afforded Bricker a means of getting before the people of politically potent Pennsylvania his theories on government, both state and national.

Since Lincoln saved the Union, he said, there has been a constant withdrawal of powers from the local communities and from the states and a development of a great central power at Washington which "can, but must not, lead to the destruction of local self-government."

The theme of state's rights, sanctity, honesty and economy in government dominated the most important speech of Bricker since he became governor on Jan. 9, and with Ohio's new U. S. senator, Robert A. Taft, was immediately accorded the status of a 1940 G. O. P. presidential possibility.

On Familiar Ground

He covered the same ground two weeks ago in first appearance outside the state as governor of Ohio, speaking in Topeka, Kas., before scores of important party leaders including Alfred M. Landon, the 1936 Republican presidential nominee, and John Hamilton, G. O. P. national chairman.

Ex-Convict, Benefactor Of Unfortunate, Breaks Plot to Extort $15,000

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 14—Two men, one of them an ex-convict, were to be arraigned today on charges of attempting to extort $15,000 from Charles A. Ward, millionaire advertising executive and benefactor of former felons.

An ex-convict himself, Ward emerged from federal prison to become president of Brown and Bigelow, large advertising specialty house where he employs about fifty former convicted criminals.

He has helped scores of others with money and to get jobs. Among the pleas for help he receives almost daily was a recent letter asking for funds but which closed with the threat of exposing him as having had a part in the three year old killing of Walter Liggett, crusading Minneapolis editor, unless the money was paid.

Ward turned the letter over to police and a trap was laid. An envoy carried a dummy package to the place designated for paying the sum and police stationed there seized Mathew W. Stegbauer, 31, who was released six months ago from Leavenworth penitentiary where Ward served a year in 1923 on a narcotics conviction, and Harold A. McAvoy, 29, a former law student and whiskey salesman.

Paul Conteras, 40, also arrested later was absolved by the two but kept in custody as a material witness.

Stebauer and McAvoy were said by police to have confessed they had no evidence linking Ward with the unsolved Liggett case.

An adventurer in his youth, Ward fought with Pancho Villa in Mexico and was convicted on the drug charge on his return to the United States. He claims the case was a frameup. In prison he met the millionaire Bigelow, serving time for income tax evasion, and on his release obtained a job with the company.

Judge Meeker Terwilliger charged the jury that on the law it should find for the plaintiff and fix the amount of damages. Leesburg asked damages for false imprisonment.

Testimony in the trial showed that Kautz obtained no waiver of a jury trial from Leesburg and exceeded his authority when he attempted to make final disposition of the case.

Leesburg charged that he was detained and ordered committed to the county jail for 30 days and fined $10 and costs on a "pretended" charge of permitting a minor to operate a motor vehicle without an operator's license. He was released under a habeas corpus action in Probate court.

SEARCH SPREADS FOR LOST PLANE IN ARCTIC AREA

JUNEAU, Alaska, Feb. 14—While searching planes remained grounded by blustery winds and snow flurries, a hunt was extended by land and by sea today for a Marine Airways hydroplane with five or six persons aboard which vanished near Juneau Sunday afternoon.

Baum, after working 48 years for the same firm as a bookkeeper, seven years ago came to the realization that "you can't take it with you" and decided on a final grand celebration. His wife had died five years before. His son, Adam, with whom he lived, was sympathetic to the plan.

He had just completed doing what many men his age have always dreamed of doing but few have been courageous enough to achieve. He took his life savings of $4,000 and spent them down to the last cent on a seven-year trip all over Europe.

"I was everywhere," he said on embarkation in New York from his steamer. "I've seen everything. I've been in Germany, my homeland, in Italy, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium and France."

"France," he added, "Oh, boy, France."

CHURCH'S DOORS LOCKED DURING SOLEMN RITUAL

Remains Of Pius Placed Next To Benedict In St. Peter's

Miserere Chanted

Blessed the body with Holy Water while the Capella Giulia choir chanted the Miserere. This ceremony completed, the canons proceeded to the high altar to await transfer of the body.

Meanwhile, Cardinal Camerlengo Eugenio Pacelli, other members of the sacred college and priests of the chamber of apostles gathered in the sanctuary. In this section of the church, built under the direction of Pius XI himself, they were blessed by the other priests and diplomatic dignitaries privileged to witness the final ceremonies.

Borne aloft by members of the noble guard, the bier then was moved slowly through the church as canons carrying torches walked with measured tread by its side. On the way, just beyond the doors of the Sacristy, the procession passed by a plaque of bronze set in the wall bearing the names of the 142 Popes buried in St. Peter's. Below the name of Benedict XV, buried in 1922, was a vacant space, soon to be filled by the name of Pius XI.

Moving on, the procession entered the basilica proper, and in a departure from ceremonies in the recent past, the body was placed before the high altar itself instead of in the chapel of the choir.

The vicar of the church, his stiff bishop's mitre topping off the rustling folds of his black sacerdotal cloak, stepped forward and blessed the body, dressed in a long priest's tunic of white wool, white linen vestment and a bishop's gown, with an embroidered cross of gold about his neck and a skull cap of papal red on his head.

Body Placed in Shroud

Priests of the basilica then wrapped the body in a crimson-lined, gold-embroidered burial shroud. Over his face and hands the majordomo placed a thin veil of white silk.

Then Monsignor Bacci, secretary of briefs, read the solemn funeral oration in the rich rolling intonations of ecclesiastical Latin.

At conclusion of the oration, the wooden coffin containing the body was lifted to the top of a magnificent catafalque, lined, covered and padded with red silk and gold tassels. Monsignor Respighi, substituting for Monsignor Arborio Mella di Sant' Elia, who was unable to fulfill his usual functions because of illness and exhaustion brought on by the pontiff's sudden death, placed at the foot of the coffin a velvet purse.

It were medals of gold, silver and bronze to the number of years of the reign of Pius. On one side of the purse were inscribed the greatest deeds of the Pope and on the other was his effigy.

Just before the coffin was sealed, relatives of Pius and a few of his most intimate friends stepped forward and kissed his emaciated face through the silk veil. Then there was placed in the coffin a glistening metal tube containing a rolled parchment recording the chief events of the pontificate.

As Monsignor Respighi withdrew, genuflecting before the high altar and crossing himself, assistants stepped forward and carried out the ceremony of shielding forever more the body of the pontiff from human sight. The lid of the coffin was put in place, clamped down with bronze screws, and crimson ribbons were wrapped around it.

The bier then was placed in a simple coffin of lead an eighth of an inch thick. This metal container bore only the coat of arms of the Pope, the years of his pontificate and a cross set in the legislature.

Placed in Oak Box

When the heavy lid had been set in place, the two coffins were placed in a third, a massive box of shining oak. It was signed and sealed by the majordomo, the Cardinal Camerlengo and the archpriest of the basilica.

While the heavy triple coffin was lifted down from the catafalque and placed on a wheeled litter, the funeral procession reformed and proceeded down the main nave to a spot where the armed forces of the Vatican were drawn up at respectful attention. The choirs chanted funeral hymns while the canons, lighted tapers in their hands, took up positions at the entrance to the crypt.

Then, as final prayers were said, the coffin was moved to the place chosen by Pius himself next to the last resting places of Pius X and Benedict XV. Pope Pius was wont to visit the spot once a year and had been heard to say:

"Here I too will someday find sweet repose."

BRICKER'S TALK IN PHILADELPHIA PRESIDENCY BID?

Impression Made On G.O.P. In Lincoln Address May Determine Future

(Continued from Page One) central authority," Bricker declared in Philadelphia last night, "has not yet been solved, even though it began at the end of the Civil War. In its proper solution lies the preservation of representative democracy."

Then the governor launched on the huge expansion of government expenditures and "the outreach of government into every field of activity, even in competition—wrong in principle—with private business."

"For many years," he said, "the emphasis of those in authority has been on building political organizations—the enhancement of personal power and a complete disregard for the interest of the taxpayer and the average citizen."

On Hopeless Course

"Nationally the government is on a hopeless course from which it cannot extricate itself. It is tied up by patronage and spending growths. The spending of money has become an obsession and no thought seems to be given to him who must pay the cost."

That cost, Bricker asserted, is "laying a dead hand on business, and as a result labor is unemployed." There must be a reexamination by public officials, he said, of what constituted public interest, and a proper adjustment of the rights of those who receive the benefits of government, as against the burden of those who pay the costs.

"It is difficult to entrench in government," the governor continued, "but it must be done if this representative system of ours is made to work—work efficiently—and if the liberties of the great common man are to be preserved."

"Already three thousand have been removed from the payroll in Ohio in one month's time, at an annual savings of three and one-half million dollars. Not only have payrolls been padded, but excess expenditures for supplies are noted on every hand. If private business in Ohio were conducted with the same reckless disregard of business principles and sound economics, there wouldn't be a solvent concern in our state today."

Confidence Needed

Representative government can exist, he said, only when there is confidence in public officials and this can be restored only by business-like conduct of public affairs. Promises will no longer establish confidence; the hour for action has arrived, Bricker declared.

The responsibility rests with the Republican party for quieting economic fear, political fear, fear that individual opportunity is gone, and the fear that one is going to be dependent upon the government for the necessities of life, the governor averred.

"Today there is much hope," he said, "because throughout the country on the eighth day of last November, the voters demanded that we return to sanity, economy and honesty in government."

"There is a returning to fundamentals. We who, in the various states, have been charged with this responsibility by the Republican party, must not fail the people who have voiced these demands."

"We must dispel fear. We must inspire confidence. We must make representative government work."

"As soon as America believes that we intend to do this, business will revive, money will flow into enterprise, labor will be employed, and the Union of Lincoln, the government of the great common man, will go forward."

RAYBURN CALLS DEMOCRATS FOR "WAR COUNCIL"

"Back President Or Face Defeat", Leader Tells Representatives

The results have been, according to the majority leadership, that the G.O.P. to date has successfully stolen the show and the headlines to boot. They represent the President as perturbed over the fact that attacks on the New Deal have mostly gone unanswered from the floor.

While Rayburn refused to discuss them, there were unconfirmed reports that he had been authorized by the president to extend conciliatory words to the sizeable bloc of disgruntled conservative Democrats who have been teaming with the Republicans. The majority leader conferred at length with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, but said later the discussion had been limited to legislation that will be taken up during the President's absence from the capital for fleet maneuvers.

The liberal bloc in the house assembled last night and made plans to defend the New Deal against attacks from the floor in the future.

The liberals numbering about 30, originally were organized by former Rep. Maury Maverick, fiery Texas progressive, who was among those defeated in the G.O.P. upsurge last November. At last night's meeting they named Rep. John M. Coffey of Washington to head their unit.

Misericere Chanted

They blessed the body with Holy Water while the Capella Giulia choir chanted the Misericere. This ceremony completed, the canons proceeded to the high altar to await transfer of the body.

Meanwhile, Cardinal Camerlengo Eugenio Pacelli, other members of the sacred college and priests of the chamber of apostles gathered in the sanctuary. In this section of the church, built under the direction of Pius XI himself, they were joined by the other priests and diplomatic dignitaries privileged to witness the final ceremonies.

Borne aloft by members of the noble guard, the bier then was moved slowly through the church as canons carrying torches walked with measured tread by its side. On the way, just beyond the doors of the Sacristy, the procession passed by a plaque of bronze set in the wall bearing the names of the 142 Popes buried in St. Peter's. Below the name of Benedict XV, buried in 1922, was a vacant space, soon to be filled by the name of Pius XI.

Moving on, the procession entered the basilica proper, and in a departure from ceremonies in the recent past, the body was placed before the high altar itself instead of in the chapel of the choir.

The vicar of the church, his stiff bishop's mitre topping off the rustling folds of his black sacerdotal cloak, stepped forward and blessed the body, dressed in a long priest's tunic of white wool, white linen vestment and a bishop's gown, with an embroidered cross of gold about his neck and a skull cap of papal red on his head.

Body Placed in Shroud

Priests of the basilica then wrapped the body in a crimson-lined, gold-embroidered burial shroud. Over his face and hands the majordomo placed a thin veil of white silk.

Then Monsignor Bacci, secretary of briefs, read the solemn funeral oration in the rich rolling intonations of ecclesiastical Latin.

At conclusion of the oration, the wooden coffin containing the body was lifted to the top of a magnificent catafalque, lined, covered and padded with red silk and gold tassels. Monsignor Respighi, substituting for Monsignor Arborio Mella di Sant' Elia, who was unable to fulfill his usual functions because of illness and exhaustion brought on by the pontiff's sudden death, placed at the foot of the coffin a velvet purse.

In it were medals of gold, silver and bronze to the number of years of the reign of Pius. On one side of the purse were inscribed the greatest deeds of the Pope and on the other was his effigy.

Just before the coffin was sealed, relatives of Pius and a few of his most intimate friends stepped forward and kissed his emaciated face through the silken veil. Then there was placed in the coffin a glistening metal tube containing a rolled parchment recording the chief events of the pontificate.

As Monsignor Respighi withdrew, genuflecting before the high altar and crossing himself, assistants stepped forward and carried out the ceremony of shielding forever more the body of the pontiff from human sight. The lid of the coffin was put in place, clamped down with bronze screws, and crimson ribbons were wrapped around it.

The bier then was placed in a simple coffin of lead an eighth of an inch thick. This metal container bore only the coat of arms of the Pope, the years of his pontificate and a cross set in the entrance to the crypt.

Placed in Oak Box

When the heavy lid had been set in place, the two coffins then were placed in a third, a massive box of shining oak. It was signed and sealed by the majordomo, the Cardinal Camerlengo and the archpriest of the basilica.

While the heavy triple coffin was lifted down from the catafalque and placed on a wheeled litter, the funeral procession reformed and proceeded down the main nave to a spot where the armed forces of the Vatican were drawn up at respectful attention. The choirs chanted funeral hymns while the canons, lighted tapers in their hands, took up positions at the entrance to the crypt.

Then, as final prayers were said, the coffin was moved to the place chosen by Pius himself next to the last resting places of Pius X and Benedict XV. Pope Pius was wont to visit the spot once a year and had been heard to say:

"Here I too will someday find sweet repose."

PRESIDENT MAY LOOK TO WEST FOR NEW JUDGE

Note Of Gratitude Sent To Justice Brandeis After Retirement

WORK FOR RACE PLANNED

Roosevelt May Set Record By Appointing Majority Of High Court

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—With the retirement of famed liberal Justice Louis D. Brandeis, President Roosevelt today was believed to be looking to the West for his next appointment to the supreme court bench.

Justice Brandeis, 82 years old and only recently recovered from an attack of the grippe, notified Mr. Roosevelt of his retirement in a brief note late yesterday.

According to the immediate retirement, the President responded with an expression of the nation's gratitude for his services and added a hope that "you will be spared for many long years to come to render additional services to mankind."

May Work for Race

While Justice Brandeis gave no reason for his action, friends expect him to use his influence to soften the blows of persecution aimed at fellow Jews in many parts of the world.

Mr. Roosevelt, who suppressed a known desire to recognize the West in recently appointing Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard, to the high court bench, is expected to select a new justice from west of the Mississippi river.

The appointment will be the President's fourth—but one less than a majority of the tribunal. With two other retirements possible, Mr. Roosevelt may set a modern record by naming a majority of the court before the expiration of his second term.

Names in the forefront of speculation included: Federal Circuit Judges Joseph C. Hutcheson of Houston, Tex.; Sam G. Bratton, of Albuquerque, N. M.; William Denman of San Francisco, District of Columbia Circuit Judge Harold Stephens of Utah, Senator Lewis Schwellenbach (D) of Washington and Dean Wiley B. Rutledge of the University of Iowa law school.

If geographical considerations are laid aside, the promotion of Attorney-General Frank Murphy, of Michigan, and Solicitor-General Robert H. Jackson, of New York, loomed among the possibilities for the vacant seat.

Appointment of a new justice presumably will not change the already liberal complexion of the court. Justice Brandeis, known as a liberal during his 22 years and eight months service, has played a prominent part in molding the court along new lines.

Even though defeated in the bitterly-fought supreme court enlargement plan, Mr. Roosevelt was within striking distance of naming a majority of justices of his own personal choice.

Three Appointed

Mr. Roosevelt first appointed Justice Hugo Black to succeed Justice Willis Vandeveer, who retired. He has since named Justices Stanley Reed and Frankfurter.

Retirement of Justice Brandeis had been expected for months. In delicate health for years, Justice Brandeis was said to feel keenly the difficulty of carrying his share of the burden of the court.

SCOUT DISPLAY GETS ATTENTION AT CITY LIBRARY

An unusual display of interest to Boy Scouts and their friends was prepared in the Circleville library Monday in connection with the observance of Boy Scout Week and the annual district rally in Memorial hall.

The display, located in the front half of the library, is built around the Boy Scout merit badge series of books. Numerous articles of equipment used in various work for merit badges are displayed. Books on various subjects of special interest to Scouts are displayed.

PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

I VOTE YES

President Roosevelt has renewed his previous recommendation that Congress take steps to abolish tax exempt government bonds and salaries. Passing, for the moment, the question whether this can be done by legislation, rather than constitutional amendment, I strongly support the President in this matter.

The subject is enormously complicated and no one with certainty can foresee all results of the proposed change. But there are few readers of this paper who are not direct or indirect "coupon clippers". It is doubtful if a single bank deposit or insurance premium has not been reinvested, in part, in the bonds of government, federal, state and municipal. So the widest possible discussion and understanding should be had.

The proposal is not new. For years men in both parties have urged it. For the past six years it has been hinted PETTENGILL that the Treasury was lukewarm, if not secretly hostile, because it was increasing the federal debt rapidly and constantly and so wanted to borrow money as cheaply as possible.

Roughly, $45,000,000,000 of federal bonds and notes are outstanding. Neither the bonds nor the income from them is taxed by the federal government, nor by the States, except once in a lifetime by inheritance taxes. Roughly, about $25,000,000,000 of state and municipal bonds outstanding are not taxed by the states nor by the federal government. Here are about seventy billions in tax free securities. The wealth which they represent earns an annual income of more than two billion from the country, but pays no tax to support the public service of the country. The very rich, who invest almost exclusively in government securities, pay practically no direct tax to support the 182,000 governments

The solution should be that all bonds, State and federal, should be subjected to tax under conditions where the State could tax income from federal bonds, as well as its own; and while the federal government could tax income from State and municipal bonds, as well as its own. Then no public borrower, State or federal, would enjoy an advantage over the other. Unless the problem can be approached in reciprocal fashion it is unlikely that anything will be agreed to. The States, through their Congressmen and Senators, will certainly object violently against permitting Uncle Sam to tax their bonds unless they can tax Uncle Sam's bonds.

How much tail chasing the program involves no one can say. Government bonds, state and federal, sell at a low interest rate. The investor takes less interest because he pays no tax. Tax him and he will insist on a higher interest rate.

This higher interest rate on taxable bonds must come from all other taxpayers. So the problem is not simple. Others must pay more taxes because the bondholder pays more taxes. Nevertheless it is probable that government will get more in taxes from bondholders than it will pay them in increased interest rates.

This is largely because more wealthy bond owners will come within the higher income tax brackets. Unless new taxes exceed new interest costs, the whole discussion is largely theoretical.

But if taxes exceed interest paid out, government bonds will become less attractive. And that is very desirable—indeed, a prime argument for the proposal. It will tend to drive investment out of government bonds into the obligations of our free enterprise system. It will make it more difficult for government to borrow money. That should clamp a powerful brake on continuing hellbent into Fascism or Socialism. Therefore, I vote Yes.

388 NEW BILLS PUT IN HOPPER OF LEGISLATURE

Last Day For Filing Sees Much Activity In State Assembly

IMPORTANT ACTS CITED

Revision Of Many Ohio Departments Urged In Measures

COLUMBUS, Feb. 14—Legislators, clerks and newsmen dug their way out of an avalanche of bills today—388 new ones and a total of 869—and came up with about 50 that had a chance for passage, according to general assembly leaders.

Most important of the new bills would:

1—Abolish the state tax commission and transfer its duties to a department of taxation under a three-member board of appeals.

A commissioner would be appointed at a yearly salary of $7,500, with a four-year term, while commissioners would have six-year terms at $5,000 a year. Senate Majority Leader Frank E. Whittemore said the bill might be amended to provide that the commissioner be placed under civil service.

2—Reorganize the conservation department by abolishing the present eight-member council and creating a nine-member council to serve for eight years instead of six.

A commissioner would be appointed by the council at a salary of $5,000 a year. No salary was set up for council members.

3—Reorganize the liquor control department, abolish the present board and set up a new three-member board and a director.

The director's salary would be $6,500 a year, board members $4,500 a year. The present director and board members receive similar salaries.

The board would be empowered to consider, hear and determine appeals from liquor law violations, while the director could suspend the sale of brands to state stores when vendors were found to have violated the law. He also could limit the number of vendors doing business with the state.

Supported by the administration and prepared by liquor department officials, the bill was almost certain of passage in the Republican-controlled legislature.

4—Create a state purchasing director at $7,500 a year, provide for centralized purchases of supplies and provide penalties for collusion and graft. The job of state purchasing agent would be abolished.

Another bill calls for a uniform system governing purchases made by the state and other political subdivisions.

The house worked five hours yesterday to introduce 322 bills and swell the total to 673, while the senate took things easier and sent "only" 66 measures to the hopper to make the total 198.

The 83rd general assembly was still 167 bills short of the flood of legislation that hit both houses in the last legislature. When the smoke cleared a year ago today there were 1,036 pieces of legislation.

House Majority Leader J. Harry McGregor predicted that only about 30 or 35 bills would be enacted into law, while chances were good for about 15 in the senate, leaders there said.

McGregor sent a bill to the house hopper which would remove the power of county commissioners to fill a vacancy 30 days before election and restore the duty to the probate judge, auditor and recorder.

The 92nd general assembly, overwhelmingly Democratic, passed a much-discussed measure empowering the county commissioners to fill a vacancy a few days before the death of a commissioner in order that a Democrat would be assured of the job. It was dubbed the "sick commissioner" bill.

Under a house bill seeking to impose additional restrictions on the sale of beer and liquor all territory outside of municipal corporations would become "dry." The measure would make it unlawful for roadhouses to sell intoxicating liquor.

Other sections prohibit the sale of liquor within one block of a church or school, employment of women in liquor establishments, sale of beer on Sundays and sale of beer to persons under 21 years old.

Take the number of married women school teachers in your large counties of this state. And again, take your county officials all over the state making their wives their deputies.

"You cannot get the exact figures in this great menace as these wives hide under their maiden name."

He added that 100 competent applicants can be found for every civil service position, or any position vacated by a married woman, who has a husband employed, no matter how capable she may be.

Members of the legislature are invited to speak over the air on legislative matters twice each week.

Oesterle Dog, Laddie Boy, Does Valued Task

By S. D. Fridley
Phone, Ashville, 79

We've told you about it several times but just once more won't do much damage. "The thing that is different in news," Laddie Boy is an 18 month old Shepard dog at the home of Ludwig and Nellie Oesterle in Walnut township. The Oesters live off the highway something near an eighth of a mile and the mail box, of course, the same distance away. In making these daily trips out the lane for the mail, Laddie Boy was always their companion. And with but little thought of making a mail carrier of him, he was permitted occasionally to carry a piece and by his actions it was easy to see that this much pleased him. He was always ready and anxious to go on every trip and more and more mail was entrusted to him to carry, until he was doing the job without any assistance. And Laddie Boy now makes the trip regularly each day to meet the mail carrier, Clayton Baum who sees to it that Laddie is well taken care of and proudly sent on his way. So we have given you something different and what we call news.

Ashville—

G. A. Hook, of Hooks Corner Store, was confined to his bed Monday with a couple degrees of fever. He is improved this morning and will be about again in a couple of days. . . . Dan Taylor who has been poorly most of the winter was able to come down town yesterday. . . . William Abbott, our long time gardener, and who has been sick for several weeks, is reported as having had a "good day" yesterday. . . . Herb Gregg with an assistant, is removing the large elm tree from the sidewalk and fronting the Plum building. It had been there for at least fifty years. . . . Ned Dreisbach, deputy sealer of weights and measures and a part of the county auditor's office personnel, was here yesterday testing a community farm scale for G. D. Rader.

Mrs. C. B. Teegardin and Son, known "the world around" as shorthorn cattle breeders, are exhibiting five head of their choice animals at the stock show now being held on Treasure Island, San Francisco, California. The freight charge on this car of cattle was $400. Three caretakers, and who have all there is to know about a cattle show ring, are with this valuable exhibition herd.

We told you that we were not quite sure about when the thousands of crows held their big convention up on the Teegardin and Peters farms last year. Today we met both Hartley Peters, and Paul Teegardin here in town. They were among those who took a few wicked shots at assembled birds when in session a year ago, and they told us it was just a year now when the black feathered tribe had paid them to visit. None worth mentioning has put in an appearance as yet and are, the boys think, holding their meeting elsewhere because of the ugly reception they received at last year's meet.

PRESIDENT MAY LOOK TO WEST FOR NEW JUDGE

Note Of Gratitude Sent To Justice Brandeis After Retirement

WORK FOR RACE PLANNED

Roosevelt May Set Record By Appointing Majority Of High Court

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—With the retirement of famed liberal Justice Louis D. Brandeis, President Roosevelt today was believed to be looking to the West for his next appointment to the supreme court bench.

Justice Brandeis, 82 years old and only recently recovered from an attack of the grippe, notified Mr. Roosevelt of his retirement in a brief note late yesterday.

According to the immediate retirement, the President responded with an expression of the nation's gratitude for his services and added a hope that "you will be spared for many long years to come to render additional services to mankind."

May Work for Race

While Justice Brandeis gave no reason for his action, friends expect him to use his influence to soften the blows of persecution aimed at fellow Jews in many parts of the world.

Mr. Roosevelt, who suppressed a known desire to recognize the West in recently appointing Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard, to the high court bench, is expected to select a new justice from west of the Mississippi river.

The appointment will be the President's fourth—but one less than a majority of the tribunal. With two other retirements possible, Mr. Roosevelt may set a modern record by naming a majority of the court before the expiration of his second term.

Names in the forefront of speculation included: Federal Circuit Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson of Houston, Tex.; Sam G. Bratton of Albuquerque, N. M.; William Denman of San Francisco, District of Columbia Circuit Judge Harold Stephens of Utah, Senator Lewis Schwellenbach (D) of Washington and Dean Wiley B. Rutledge of the University of Iowa law school.

If geographical considerations are laid aside, the promotion of Attorney-General Frank Murphy, of Michigan, and Solicitor-General Robert H. Jackson, of New York, loomed among the possibilities for the vacant seat.

Appointment of a new justice presumably will not change the already liberal complexion of the court. Justice Brandeis, known as a liberal during his 22 years and eight months service, has played a prominent part in molding the court along new lines.

Even though defeated in the bitterly-fought supreme court enlargement plan, Mr. Roosevelt was within striking distance of naming a majority of justices of his own personal choice.

Three Appointed

Mr. Roosevelt first appointed Justice Hugo Black to succeed Justice Willis Vandeveanter, who retired. He has since named Justices Stanley Reed and Frankfurter.

Retirement of Justice Brandeis had been expected for months. In delicate health for years, Justice Brandeis was said to feel keenly the difficulty of carrying his share of the burden of the court.

SCOUT DISPLAY GETS ATTENTION AT CITY LIBRARY

An unusual display of interest to Boy Scouts and their friends was prepared in the Circleville library Monday in connection with the observance of Boy Scout Week and the annual district rally in Memorial hall.

The display, located in the front hall of the library, is built around the Boy Scout merit badge series of books. Numerous articles of equipment used in various work for merit badges are displayed. Books on various subjects of special interest to Scouts are displayed.

PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

I VOTE YES

President Roosevelt has renewed his previous recommendation that Congress take steps to abolish tax exempt government bonds and salaries. Passing, for the moment, the question whether this can be done by legislation, rather than constitutional amendment, I strongly support the President in this matter.

The subject is enormously complicated and no one with certainty can foresee all results of the proposed change. But there are few readers of this paper who are not direct or indirect "coupon clippers". It is doubtful if a single bank deposit or insurance premium has not been reinvested, in part, in the bonds of government, federal, state and municipal.

So the widest possible understanding should be had.

The proposal is not new. For years men in both parties have urged it. For the past six years it has been hinted that the Treasury was lukewarm, if not secretly hostile, because it was increasing the federal debt rapidly and constantly and so wanted to borrow money as cheaply as possible.

Roughly, $45,000,000,000 of federal bonds and notes are outstanding. Neither the bonds nor the income from them is taxed by the federal government, nor by the States, except once in a lifetime by inheritance taxes.

Roughly, about $25,000,000,000 of state and municipal bonds outstanding are not taxed by the states nor by the federal government.

Here are about seventy billions in tax free securities. The wealth which they represent earns an annual income of more than two billion from the country, but pays no tax to support the public service of the country. The very rich, who invest almost exclusively in government securities, pay practically no direct tax to the same shoe would pinch the other foot.

The solution should be that all bonds, State and federal, should be subjected to tax under conditions where the State could tax income from federal bonds, as well as its own; and while the federal government could tax income from State and municipal bonds, as well as its own. Then no public borrower, State or federal, would enjoy an advantage over the other. Unless the problem can be approached in reciprocal fashion it is unlikely that anything will be agreed to.

The States, through their Congressmen and Senators, will certainly object violently against permitting Uncle Sam to tax their bonds unless they can tax Uncle Sam's bonds.

How much tail chasing the program involved no one can say. Government bonds, state and federal, sell at a low interest rate. The investor takes less interest because he pays no tax. Tax him and he will insist on a higher interest rate.

This higher interest rate on taxable bonds must come from all other taxpayers. So the problem is not simple. Others must pay more taxes because the bondholder pays more taxes. Nevertheless it is probable that government will get more in taxes from bondholders than it will pay them in increased interest rates.

This is largely because more wealthy bond owners will come within the higher income tax brackets. Unless new taxes exceed new interest costs, the whole discussion is largely theoretical.

But if taxes exceed interest paid out, government bonds will become less attractive. And that is very desirable—indeed, a prime argument for the proposal. It will tend to drive investment out of government bonds into the obligations of our free enterprise system.

It will make it more difficult for government to borrow money. That should clamp a powerful brake on continuing hellbent into Fascism or Socialism. Therefore, I vote Yes.

NEW TRIPLE ENTENTE

OUR people have read, with mixed emotions, the report of an unusual event in Mexico City last Sunday. Col. Fulgencio Batista, called "dictator" of Cuba, was visiting there on a good-will tour like his recent trip to our own country. Speaking to the Confederation of Mexican Workers, which is a power in Mexico, he declared that if the independence of Mexico were threatened today it would "count on Cuba's support."

We might get from that statement the idea that Batista was pledging Cuban help for Mexico against encroachments from Uncle Sam. But not so. "We have the sympathies of the United States," he added, "in the hope of solidarity among American nations." He evidently has confidence in the good faith of this country.

Then Vicente Toledano, an important labor leader, took up the theme and told the big audience that Mexico was standing back of France, England and other free countries in opposing Fascism, and that Mexico, Cuba and the United States were "united in the ideals of liberty and justice." A sort of "Triple Entente" for the New World.

This is reassuring, after the apparent hostility shown us recently in Mexico. Perhaps we have exaggerated that; or else the Mexicans are seeing a new light.

Here is realism, anyway, along with idealism. The American republics have to stand together.

TRAGIC CHILDREN

SECTION IX of the Children's Charter contains this aim:

"For every child a community which recognizes and plans for his needs; protects him against physical danger, moral hazards, and disease; provides him with safe and wholesome places for play and recreation; and makes provision for his cultural and social needs."

There are many children in many parts of the world who have never been very close to such blessings. In our own country there are children who are not protected against any of those dangers and perils. Many American hearts have been touched by the need of the Spanish children. They should not stop with their contribution to a fund for feeding those foreign children. They should go ahead to face and solve the problem at hand for caring for the young Americans who lack adequate food and clothing and security and wholesome recreation.

The children of share croppers and the children of our big city slums are free from the war terrors that the little folks in Spain have suffered, but they are not free from other terrors not of their own

CRISIS IS GETTING CLOSE

WASHINGTON — There was just one thing behind the precipitate return of Ambassador Joe Kennedy to his post at the Court of St. James'. The crisis in Europe is getting close.

Joe got a phone call from the President in Palm Beach, hopped a plane, arrived in Washington at 4 a.m., had a long talk with Roosevelt, hopped on to New York and sailed on the Queen Mary next morning.

What had happened in Europe was the crumbling of Spanish resistance more quickly than was expected. With Mussolini now able to use Spain as a base for cutting France off from North Africa, he is more likely to put the screws on France immediately.

The President is very pessimistic about the entire situation, and is inclined to credit reports which various people have brought back from Europe, that nothing but a miracle can head off a world catastrophe.

The possibility of some last minute move by the United States to head off a showdown is not entirely out of the question, though still in the nebulous state. At any rate, Roosevelt considers it wise strategy to have one of his ablest ambassadors on the job in London before the storm breaks.

JIMMY ROOSEVELT'S CHATEAU

When John Balderston, crack newsman who turned playwright, went to Hollywood, he saved his cash, gradually bought three houses for investment purposes.

One he fitted out for the upper class Hollywood renter, complete with family portraits brought from England. Another he fitted out for the lower middle-class rent-payer, and a third for the Hollywood underprivileged.

James Roosevelt has just rented the third, or underprivileged house, which has confirmed the movie people's impression that Sam Goldwyn is paying him only $500 a week, which is starvation wages for Hollywood.

NOTE—The late Frank B. Kellogg, when Secretary of State, always used to read the late New York World, because he said he marveled at the uncanny accuracy of John Balderston, The World's London correspondent.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a beautiful morning and soon outside with the dog who lives right up to her nickname of Puddles unless taken for a quick walk. Stopped under the elm tree and pulled off a bud. Broke it open and there found green leaves ready to put in appearance. That in the middle of February. Away, then, to the post, there to chat with Doctor Shane, who along with all other physicians of the ville, is kept on a high jump these days.

Came a postcard from Denny and Bob Pickens, who said that they had just returned from the beach at Miami and there saw Mr. and Mrs. Meinhardt Crites, Gerald Hanley, A. C. Cook and Dave Dunlap. "So many Circleville folk here that it seems almost like home," they wrote.

Dropped in for a chat with Ed Wallace at his bakery and there found John A. Wallace just out after a long illness. Talked with Ed about this and that and particularly about the ville's future. There is one man who is sold and who, incidentally, gives more of his time and money to civic projects than any other citizen. If we had a few more like him here we would reach our goal much sooner than otherwise.

At the Coffee Club did meet and defeat Charlie Gilmore, he acting the ungracious host. All of which gave me great pleasure, for beating Charlie is very much of an occasion. To the office came a comic valentine showing a man with a very small fish telling about the big one that got away. And the verse, dedicated to the scrivener, read: "When you have an audience your enthusiasm becomes afire. The fact that you are a modern fisherman makes you the world's biggest liar."

Waved to Ben Gordon and dropped in to see how the improvements are progressing for John Ryan. There will be a beautiful drug store when the changes are complete. Passed the time of day with Bob Smith and then Forrest Short, the auditor, who enjoys living in the country more than in town. Well, I would too if I had a fine new home out there. And Forrest has. Those twins of his appear cuter every time I see them.

Ed Rector dropped in to remind me of the Mount Pleasant Brotherhood meeting Wednesday night and Ed Wallace offered transportation, which did accept. Hon. Paul Ballard, of Jackson, is to be the speaker, being obtained by William Radcliff, the legislator. Bill's doing real well up there in Columbus, really trying to represent the people of the county. He is a fine young man who takes his obligations seriously.

If this weather continues that highway west of town will be completed long ahead of schedule. No one expected anything like this when the work started. Incidentally that is a fine Sunday afternoon walk out there. Turney and Lady Weldon make it each Sunday and, of course, others I have not heard about. No, I saw no one, for I care too little about walking.

Scarlet Fever Also Often Overlooked

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I SPOKE yesterday of the cases of whooping cough which are overlooked in adults. In discussing this matter with a health officer of a large city, I was made aware of the fact that we also have a fairly widespread epidemic of scarlet fever and here, too, it is quite possible that especially in adults the disease may be overlooked and a contagious carrier allowed to go abroad spreading the disease.

I remember a fellow medical officer of mine, during the World War, was commanded by the surgeon-general's office to go up to a small encampment where it was reported they had an epidemic of sore throat. When he arrived there, the doctor in charge of the camp said that he had a very peculiar condition which he had a great many cases of sore throat with a distinct eruption on the body. As soon as my friend had seen a few of the cases he took the doctor aside and said, "Doctor, you have an epidemic of scarlet fever."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Scarlet fever was due to milk. He had a great many cases of sore throat with a distinct eruption on the body. As soon as my friend had seen a few of the cases he took the doctor aside and said, "Doctor, you have an epidemic of scarlet fever."

Scarlet fever has been so rare within the last ten years that a great many people have grown to maturity without being exposed to it. This does not mean, however, that they are immune. Quite on the contrary, they are as liable to get it as a small child who has never been exposed. They may catch the disease in a mild form and feel well enough to walk around, and by this means they undoubtedly will infect a certain number of the people they meet.

The streptococci milk-borne sore throat does, indeed, look a great deal like scarlet fever. Adults for some reason are more likely to get streptococci sore throat than children. In an epidemic reported in Iowa last year there were 135 adults affected and 60 children. The symptoms occur about three days following the use of the new drug, sulfaamide, is so long a period of quarantine required. In streptococci sore throat no quarantine what-ever is necessary.

In the treatment for scarlet fever convalescent serum—in other words, blood serum from a patient who has recently recovered from scarlet fever—is probably our best treatment. In streptococci sore throat the use of the new drug, sulfaamide, is advocated.

Treatment and, especially, quarantine in the two conditions are quite different. A patient with scarlet fever should properly be quarantined for six weeks because the contagion is liable to be spread for that period of time. In no other disease, except mumps, is so long a period of quarantine required. In streptococci sore throat no quarantine what-ever is necessary.

NEW TRIPLE ENTENTE

OUR people have read, with mixed emotions, the report of an unusual event in Mexico City last Sunday. Col. Fulgencio Batista, called "dictator" of Cuba, was visiting there on a good-will tour like his recent trip to our own country. Speaking to the Confederation of Mexican Workers, which is a power in Mexico, he declared that if the independence of Mexico were threatened today it would "count on Cuba's support."

We might get from that statement the idea that Batista was pledging Cuban help for Mexico against encroachments from Uncle Sam. But not so. "We have the sympathies of the United States," he added, "in the hope of solidarity among American nations." He evidently has confidence in the good faith of this country.

Then Vicente Toledo, an important labor leader, took up the theme and told the big audience that Mexico was standing back of France, England and other free countries in opposing Fascism, and that Mexico, Cuba and the United States were "united in the ideals of liberty and justice." Washington P. T. A.

A Valentine party arranged by Oakley Leist and his committee was enjoyed by members of Washington Parent-Teacher association Monday in the school auditorium. A short business session was led by Howard Huston, president.

Two sound pictures were shown for the entertainment of the children while a spelling bee was held for the adults. Prize for the best lady speller went to Miss Anna Pontius of Tarlton, who was celebrating her 75th birthday.
Congratulations were extended to her by Wilson Dunkel for her birthday and for being the best speller of the one group. Boyd
Stout received the men's prize.

Pontius presented a reading and teaching experiences. Miss Pontius and Mr. Macklin had attended

Approximately 150 members and guests gathered in Walnut school auditorium for the Founders' Day program of Walnut Parent-Teacher association. The teachers of the school presented the program.

Mrs. Alvin Barr, president, was bers of a trio which presented several vocal selections accompanied at the piano by Miss Winn-field Roudabush.

Mrs. Homer Reber interested the assembly with her talk on the "Founders of P. T. A." Her talk included the organization of the National, State and township associations. Of the greatest interest to the audience was the hist-that while numerous noted vessels were mentioned in history, no definite facts were presented in regard to them.

She discussed the facts leading to the war, mentioning in this connection the chagrin of England over losing her colonies, stating that the same attitude of highhandedness caused the declaration of war by Congress against Great Britain June 18, 1812. At that time our navy boasted 24 armed vessels.

Mrs. Mack carefully traced the origin of the navy and told of the addition of vessels from the time of the war of the Revolution to the War of 1812, and spoke of the addition of vessels after the war began. She told in detail of "The Constitution" one of the most famous of the vessels of the war and told of the real accomplishments of that historic ship. She also mentioned the eventful and romantic career of this ship, and said that perhaps more than all else it stands for the freedom of the seas.

Book Review, Discussion Of Magazines Enjoyed

Club Has Splendid Meeting Monday Evening

Mrs. Bishop Given reviewed "Listen! The Wind!" by Anne M. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lemuel Weldon talked on the topic, "Some New Magazines" at the regular session of Monday club which was Monday evening in the Library Trustees' room of Memorial Hall. Miss Nell Weldon, chairman, and members of the Literature Division presented the program.

Mrs. Weldon talked first on the program, limiting her subject to magazines which have been published in the last three years. The trend in new magazines, she said, has been toward picture magazines. Since the war, rotogravure sections, tabloid and specialized magazines in various fields, including art, theatre, screen, nudism, fashion, have been whetting the readers' eyes. Pictures have become more candid, more daring. Beauty, color and improved printing have balanced audacious trends.

Continuing, she mentioned that European editors started experimenting right after the war and found picture magazines good investments. October 10, 1936, the American surface was scratched when Monte Bourjaily brought out a revitalized Mid-Week Pictorial. Five weeks later amid much fanfare, the first issue of Life reached the subscribers, 250,000 by mail, and another 200,000 were run off for the news stands. By the seventh issue dated Jan. 11, 1938, the orders were 760,000 copies.

On Jan. 5, 1937, another magazine similar to "Life" was brought out by Gardner and John Cowles, publishers, called "Look". For the first publication 400,000 copies were printed. Ten days later the printing order was increased to 855,000. Another magazine, "Click", is sensational.

Mrs. Weldon said that several magazines which have been published for many years, within the last two years have changed their design and size by streamlining their issues. McCall's, the new Scribner's and the revamped American Mercury, and the two score pocket size digests. All told, at least 40 pocket sized magazines are clamoring at the news stands of America. Readers Digest showed the way with 1,800,000 circulation. In addition to this magazine published in a special Braille edition. Another recent publication is "Coronet". The first issue had 186 pages, including 18 color plates, 39 full-page photographs, 34 cartoons and humorous features and 20 short stories and non-fiction articles.

Miss Weldon then presented Mrs. Given who said in introducing her subject that the book was a story of the flight made by the Lindberghs across the Atlantic Ocean from Africa to Brazil in December 1933, at the end of their survey of the North American air routes. The purpose of the journey as told in the foreword of the book was to study the air routes between America and Europe.

This book then is a thrilling narrative of the ten days' adventures that happened to these famous people, flying from the Cape Verde Islands to Natal Brazil, sixteen hundred miles of uncharted flying, most of which is over open sea.

Mrs. Given mentioned that the style of the book stamp it unmistakably as the work of a woman, but hidden behind the beautiful phrases, the whimsical characterizations and the small personal episodes, lies an exact accounting of all important details pertaining to plans for the manipulations and actual piloting. Mrs. Lindbergh flew with her husband as his radio operator and co-pilot. "Like the repetition of a theme running through a great symphony, we find throughout the book allusions to the wind and repeatedly the wind is mentioned as an all important factor" was one thought expressed by Mrs. Given in her review.

The plane, the Tingmissartog, was named in Greenland for the Eskimo cry when a plane is sighted and means "The one who flies like a big bird". The first lap of the Lindberghs' trip was the flight from the Azores to the Cape Verde Islands. The next landing was at Bathurst, just below Dakar. The second step in their flight was carefully planned, from Bathurst to Natal, Brazil. It was during this part of their flight that one realizes how vitally important was Mrs. Lindbergh's work as radio operator and co-pilot. Mrs. Given illustrated the story of the flight for the audience with a map.

Mrs. Hays presided at the business session, during which Mrs. John Caldwell was elected to active membership in the club.

Mrs. Charles T. Gilmore, chairman, Miss Sadie Burner and Mrs. Robert Musser are members of the nominating committee for the year.

University's Trustees Have Two Major Tasks

COLUMBUS, Feb. 14—Two important tasks today faced the board of trustees of Ohio State university. They were:

Immediate investigation into alleged un-American activities at the university. A committee of three board members is expected to begin hearings on charges Friday.

Selection in the near future of a new president of the institution to succeed George W. Rightmire who retired last July. The board's choice is expected to be announced March 13.

Following its regular meeting, the board announced that it was prepared to conduct its own probe into charges of subversive activities at the university and named Carlton S. Dargusch chairman of the investigation group.

Action by the board was prompted by recent charges of the Franklin County Council of the American Legion that students were participating in un-American activities. The Legion sought a legislative investigation.

Appealing for a board investigation, at a meeting of trustees, Dargusch said:

"The public has a right to know if the university is being conducted in a proper and lawful manner, and specifically if certain employees of the university are engaged in un-American activities".

Following his selection as chairman of the investigating body, Dargusch declared:

"This will be no whitewash. The first hearing probably will start Friday".

Members of the Legion will be asked to submit all evidence available to support its charge. Meanwhile senate and house leaders indicated they would watch progress of board's probe closely. A formal report of the investigation is expected to be made April 1.

Although no formal statement was made following the board session about selection of a new president, it was learned that at least six men are being considered for the post. Four of these are from outside the state, it was said.

William McPherson has served as acting president since Rightmire's retirement.

will co-star in a specially written dramatic skit titled "24 hours," when the Star Theatre broadcasts its weekly program Wednesday, Feb. 15, at 9 p. m. Ed James authored the story especially for the two movie stars. Ken Murray again will assist as master of ceremonies. Charlie Ruggles, Ned Sparks, Frances Langford, Kenny Baker, Jimmy Wallington and David Brookman's orchestra will also appear on the 60 minute show.

RADIO NEWS IN BRIEF

There will be two "firsts" during the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts Feb. 18. It will be the initial time Lauritz Melchior is to be heard on the air series and will mark the first time that Herbert Jennis, continental baritone, will be on the American radio. The opera is "Tristan and Isolde".

The entire cast of the Kate Smith Hour has been invited to attend "The American Way" by the stars, Fredric March and Florence Eldridge who will offer scenes from the play on the Kate Smith show Feb. 16.

Lum and Abner turn their attention to the Girl Scouts of America in their broadcast over CBS Monday, Feb. 20.

Ben Grauer, announcer on the Kay Kyser "Kollege of Musical Knowledge," is now acting as master of ceremonies for another quiz show, "Name the Place," a travelogue audience participation program in which contestants are asked to identify localities all over the world. The program is heard over the NBC-Red network Sundays.

Lew Lehr, who heckles Ben Bernie on the ole maestro's Sunday programs over CBS, will guest star on the Tommy Riggs program over the NBC-Red network.

With a two-fold purpose, Jack Benny will take up the study of juggling during his broadcast over the NBC-Red network Sunday, Feb. 19. Jack believes that in case of a showdown, Fred Allen could best him in balancing an Indian club on his nose.

University's Trustees Have Two Major Tasks

COLUMBUS, Feb. 14—Two important tasks today faced the board of trustees of Ohio State university. They were:

Immediate investigation into alleged un-American activities at the university. A committee of three board members is expected to begin hearings on charges Friday.

Selection in the near future of a new president of the institution to succeed George W. Rightmire who retired last July. The board's choice is expected to be announced March 13.

Following its regular meeting, the board announced that it was prepared to conduct its own probe into charges of subversive activities at the university and named Carlton S. Dargusch chairman of the investigation group.

Action by the board was prompted by recent charges of the Franklin County Council of the American Legion that students were participating in un-American activities. The Legion sought a legislative investigation.

Appealing for a board investigation, at a meeting of trustees, Dargusch said:

The public has a right to know if the university is being conducted in a proper and lawful manner, and specifically if certain employees of the university are engaged in un-American activities.

Following his selection as chairman of the investigating body, Dargusch declared:

"This will be no whitewash.

The first hearing probably will start Friday."

Members of the Legion will be asked to submit all evidence available to support its charge. Meanwhile senate and house leaders indicated they would watch progress of board's probe closely. A formal report of the investigation is expected to be made April 1.

Although no formal statement was made following the board session about selection of a new president, it was learned that at least six men are being considered for the post. Four of these are from outside the state, it was said.

William McPherson has served as acting president since Rightmire's retirement.

Jockey Don Meade, suspended three years ago for betting on other horses in races in which he was riding, has been bringing in so many winners since he was reinstated in Florida that the man at the next desk suggests that Don must be betting on his own mounts now.

The entire cast of the Kate Smith Hour has been invited to attend "The American Way" by the stars, Fredric March and Florence Eldridge who will offer scenes from the play on the Kate Smith show Feb. 16.

Lum and Abner turn their attention to the Girl Scouts of America in their broadcast over CBS Monday, Feb. 20.

Ben Grauer, announcer on the Kay Kyser "College of Musical Knowledge," is now acting as master of ceremonies for another quiz show, "Name the Place," a travelogue audience participation program in which contestants are asked to identify localities all over the world. The program is heard over the NBC-Red network Sundays.

Lew Lehr, who heckles Ben Bernie on the ole maestro's Sunday programs over CBS, will guest star on the Tommy Riggs program over the NBC-Red network.
